| ABSTRACT An important phase in the development of a research project has to do with the data collection. This section needs to be carefully planned and designed in order to collect the best possible data. From the Western paradigm, there is pretty much a general consensus on how to go about the data collection procedures. However, since we are taking a decolonial stance in this program, much is still in need to be uncovered, discussed, understood, problematized, etc. Our purpose in this seminar is to bring several voices from the global south that have started or adventured alternative ways of knowing and of digging out data. It is our main interest that participants in the seminar design and implement data collection instruments that account for a decolonial take in research. |   |
| SEMINAR DESCRIPTION This seminar will have two main components. On the one hand there will be readings for the participants to discuss and connect with their research projects and on the other there will be a practical section in which participants are expected to conduct a workshop. In this workshop they should present their data collection instrument, a rationale for their choice, a general plan of how they will collect the data, and a practical activity to show their fellow classmates how this instrument works.   |   |
| SEMINAR OBJECTIVES General objective:Design and pilot the main data collection instrument.  |   |

Specific objectives

- To present a rationale for the chosen instrument.
- To elaborate on the locus of enunciation in order to connect this with their data collection instruments

SEMINAR CONTENTS

General thematic problem: Methods in dialogue (The North-South (re)visited) and the making up of a doctoral research proposal for final examination

Guiding question: Taking into account the decolonial perspective adopted by this line of research, what data collection instrument suits your research needs best?

SCHEDULE: Tuesday 12:00 -2:00

ROOM Aduanilla de Paiba - TBA

METHODOLOGY

This seminar will have common sessions where the entire 2018-3 cohort will participate in readings and discussion.

There will be reading presentations and an oral individual presentation of the doctoral research proposal to be submitted for final examination.

ASSESSMENT

Participants taking this course will be required to complete the following:

- Conducting a workshop – 30%
- Handing in final paper – 70%
